

In every issue, GCN provides essential news, analysis and insight on how government agency IT managers design, implement and manage the technologies that run government—and evaluates the emerging technologies and products that impact their work. This enables government IT marketers to tailor a unique marketing message to decision-makers 26 times a year!

GCN Update provides informed perspectives on government projects and technology product developments, offering insights on what's in store for government IT managers. Plus "NewsLinks" — which highlights the latest news IT managers need to know — and "What's More" — providing special reports and events featured exclusively online at GCN.com.

GCN Lab Reviews offers reviews and comparisons of a wide array of information technology products, with special attention to how well these products will meet the specific needs of civilian and defense agency IT users.

Tech Trends analyzes information technology developments and government IT initiatives, assessing what they mean to decision makers at civilian, defense and state/local government agencies—and how they are likely to reshape the government IT market.

Tech Strategies looks at common IT needs faced by government managers and assesses various technology approaches worth considering—and includes tips and resources on relevant suppliers and information links.

Case Studies delve into how government agencies grappled with a particular challenge and the technology solutions they deployed to solve them.

InterView offers exclusive discussions with technology thought leaders inside government, and in the broader technology world, providing insights on current trends and the future of government computing.

Commentary features guest columns from government and industry experts, including former Department of Homeland Defense metadata manager, Michael Daconta, Bill Jackson's insightful column on security, "CyberEye," and observations by GCN editor in chief, Wyatt Kash. Additional commentary is featured online at GCN.com's Tech Blog, by senior technology editor, Joab Jackson.
